

Cultural Intelligence for Multicultural and Multifaith Teams

Understanding and building cultural intelligence to foster respectful communication and inclusive behaviours across multicultural and multifaith teams.

Cultural intelligence is not simply about having an awareness of difference or celebrating diversity. It is the ability to relate and work effectively in culturally diverse situations - particularly when values, communication styles, beliefs, and lived experiences differ widely. In a globalised world and workforce, cultural intelligence is no longer optional, but rather it is a core workplace capability that underpins inclusion, collaboration, psychological safety, team performance, trust and employee wellbeing and engagement.

The program highlights the role of cultural intelligence in team inclusion, reflects on the skills and behaviours required to build the participant's cultural intelligence and provides tools to communicate and collaborate effectively with colleagues from multicultural and multifaith backgrounds.

This program is for organisations and participants looking to develop cultural intelligence to build more culturally inclusive and psychologically safe teams and workplaces.

This is a 90-minute program, delivered virtually or in person.

Learning Outcomes

By the end of this session, participants will be able to:

- Understand the experiences of team members from cultural and religious diverse backgrounds and the impacts of exclusion and discrimination on employee wellbeing and engagement, innovation and effective team collaboration and productivity.
- Outline what cultural intelligence is and how it can benefit them and their colleagues.
- Reflect on their level of cultural intelligence and have the tools to develop it further.
- Communicate effectively across cultures and support the cultural adaptation of team members.

Program Overview

Part 1: Explore the meaning of cultural diversity and inclusion, and the experiences of people from diverse cultural and faith backgrounds in the workplace.

Part 2: Understanding what cultural intelligence is, why it's important in the workplace and the benefits of cultural intelligence on employee wellbeing and engagement, innovation and effective team collaboration and productivity.
